

Last Chance to Apply!

Do you currently hold a bachelor's degree or higher?

The Teacher in Residence (TIR) program is a fast-track into teaching for those who are highly motivated and committed to the teaching profession. TIRs will earn both a master's degree and initial teaching licensure for special education. Professional development and ongoing support inside and outside the classroom is provided by clinical resident coaches (veteran teachers) and ODU faculty for the preparation year and the three years of service in the classroom.

You could earn a tuition-free master's degree with licensure in Special Education and receive a stipend for being a Teacher in Residence. NNPS will select 10 candidates to support through this endeavor. Limited spaces are available.
